Opus purchase

>> New Zealand's Opus International Consultants says it has bought Project Engineering, an engineering consultancy in Fredericton, Canada, for an undisclosed sum. Opus said it would increase Opus's presence in eastern Canada by 13 staff and lift its North America staffing to 74 in six offices. The new firm would be combined with the present Opus Fredericton business. Project Engineering provides services to local authorities and private industrial companies mainly in the areas of civil, municipal, transportation and environmental engineering.
